About Telfany

Telfany Morgan is a nationally recognized leader in emergency management and continuity strategy, with a career spanning more than two decades. From the halls of the Library of Congress to frontline municipal agencies, she has transformed how organizations prepare for and respond to crises.

Telfany is the President and Founder of Disaster Relief and Emergency Management Services, her consulting firm launched in 2017. She recently served as Executive Director of Emergency Management at Ivy Tech, the largest singly accredited U.S. community college, supporting 200,000 students across 75 communities.

Previously, she spearheaded the development of the Library of Congress's first Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP), led emergency management strategy at the CDC via Guidehouse, and advanced community resilience efforts with the City of Atlanta Fire Rescue.

Her speaking style blends charisma, tactical expertise, and lived experience, empowering audiences to lead effectively during crises.
